

Chris Lubbe, is a man who grew up in South-Africa and was treated unfair for being coloured during apartheid.

He spoke out and things were better.

He impressed me because he spoke up about equality, which not many people would've done.

I think I will speak up for other people now that

Chris has been in. He taught me to stand up for our rights and look after each other. When I first saw I thought he was very tall. My opinion grew on him when he was talking.
